Tennessee Court Order Blocks Suffrage

RULING PREVENTS CERTIFYING LAW TO WASHINGTON

JUDGE THROWS BIG ROCK
IN SUFFRAGISTS' PATH TO VICTORY
ANTIS BOLT MEET
Fifty Sneak to Alabama to Prevent Clinching Victory.
—House Unable to Meet

BULLETIN
Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 21.—The lower house of the Tennessee legislature today defeated, 50 to 0, a motion to reconsider its action in refusing the woman suffrage and ordered the senate joint ratification resolution transmitted to the senate that it might be sent to the engrossing clerk.

Many legal authorities here regard this amendment as illegitimate and they say it is a foregone conclusion that the courts will have to pass on the legality of the ratification.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 21.—Chancellor James E. Newman today issued a writ of injunction temporarily restraining Gov. Roberts, Secretary of State Parsons and the speaker of the Tennessee senate and house from certifying to Secretary of State Colby Tennessee's ratification of woman suffrage amendment. A meeting of the Tennessee house today to clinch ratification of the federal suffrage amendment was blocked by anti-suffrage members, 29 of whom left Nashville last night for Alabama so as to make it impossible a quorum at the session which was to have opened at 10 a. m.

No Quorum Today.
Only 59 members, 7 less than a quorum, answered to their names when Speaker Walker called the house to order half an hour after the regular meeting time. After the speaker declared the house in recess to allow time to give the absent-at-arms time to round up absentees. Since 30 of the absent members were reported at Decatur, Ala., however, they were not counted.

Speaker Walker directed the sergeant-at-arms to arrest and bring before the bar of the house all absent members.
Suffrage advocates had planned at the session today to move to reconsider the ratification of the amendment, which was passed 47 to 47, and then to say that motion on the table, thus preventing further efforts at reconsideration.

BOLLING MEMBERS
WANT REFERENDUM
Decatur, Ala., Aug. 21.—Twenty-five members of the Tennessee house, which was taken final action on the suffrage amendment today, arrived here this morning from Nashville and announced they would remain in Alabama until the legislature has been given an opportunity to vote on an opinion upon suffrage.
Mr. S. Hall, of Nashville, who was spoken for by the speaker, said 9 other members would join the party here later in the day. Four of the 25 now in Decatur are republicans and the others democrats.

DO YOU KNOW?

That in 1867 Wisconsin's wealth in dairy cows was $3,834,000, and that in 1918 it was $147,846,000—an increase of $144,012,000?
That there are more Guernsey cattle raised in Wisconsin than on the island of Guernsey, more Swiss than in any other state, and the Badgers are fast "moving hold" of the premier Holstein state?
Wisconsin is not a dairy state—it is the Dairy State.

Sugar Drops 2 to 4 Cents Here During Week; Market Hits Unsettled Condition

A few weeks ago sugar was selling here around 30 cents a pound, but last week local groceries were selling it for 24 and 25 cents a pound. Sugar prices have dropped from 2 to 4 cents a pound since last week, however, according to prices quoted by local dealers today. One grocer is offering a 100 pound sack of sugar for $19.50, which is a considerable reduction. This averages 20 cents a pound.

Various reasons are given for the lowered prices. One grocer points to the fact that a big shipment of sugar has been forced upon the market, and that the large quantities of sugar which have been holding, as they could not pay for it.

Speculators Selling.
Another reason for the sudden drop is that the market is being flooded with sugar, and the increase in the supply has naturally brought down the selling price. Beet sugar will be in the market about six weeks from now, with the prospect of such a flooded sugar market, grocers are reducing the price on the cane sugar.

Exports Arriving.
"Java sugar is coming in, too," he added, "and this has added to the supply of sugar."
Opinions vary as to the future price of sugar. One grocer said he didn't look for the price to drop any lower. Another expressed it as his idea that anyone wanting sugar at a low price would do well to lay in a stock now. The next few weeks will probably bring some definite information as to whether the consumers may look for lower prices, or not.

As the canning season is pretty well over, the demands for sugar for canning purposes will not be as heavy as during the past weeks, and this fact may help to keep the price down to a normal level.

FARMERS COMBINE AT MEETING HERE

Form County Agricultural Association to Boost Farming and Farm Products

For the purpose of taking definite steps for the promotion of the Rock County Agricultural Association, the board of directors of the Rock County Farm Bureau met last night at the county house.

The Rock County Agricultural Association will act as the business organization for the members of the bureau. It is to be capitalized for $50,000 and be run as a co-operative organization.

The purpose, as stated in the constitution, is as follows: "The object for which this corporation is formed is for the purpose of buying and selling seed, and the buying and selling of other farm products and supplies, to build or lease sheds, barns and other buildings necessary to handle, store, warehouse, and otherwise dispose of any article of merchandise above mentioned and included, to transport the same, or to do any other thing necessary or incidental to the conduct or furtherance of the business aforesaid."

Not New Idea.

The Rock County Agricultural Association is not a new kind of organization. Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, New York and a large number of other states have through co-operative organizations, through this organization the farmers are able to purchase products such as feed, seed, sugar, etc., in cash on delivery, and at a low price secured, but the quality of the product is the best. Most agricultural associations employ a business man. He visits the farms, buys them directly of the farmer. This seed is brought to warehouses and there cleared and sold directly to the farmers at cost. This eliminates any possibility of a farmer getting obnoxious weeds started on his farm. If potatoes are purchased the buyer gets them directly from the grower and there is no chance for the speculator. In this way the object is to get the commodity directly from the producer to the consumer and eliminate as many speculators as possible.

For the purpose of finding out if the farmers of Rock County are back of this movement a committee consisting of William H. Houghton, H. C. Houghton, Janesville; C. E. Culver, Janesville, is going to call a county-wide Farm Bureau meeting at the Defauld, Ill. Agricultural Association has a capital of $100,000. It handled 5 cars of apples, 21 car of potatoes and a car load of sugar and did a business of over $200,000 in seeds last year. This shows what an Agricultural Association can do for the farmers of the county.

Advised Milk.

The milk committee of the bureau reported that $200 had been raised for the purpose of advertising milk in Rock County. But it is the intention of the bureau to have only one advertise milk, and its products in the county. There will be a meeting of all the distributors in the county called soon. At this meeting H. A. Clevenger, president of the Wisconsin Dairy Council will speak.

The committee appointed to arrange for this meeting is composed of: Henry Whelan, Beloit; and William Scofield, Edgerton.

C. O. Osgood, Oxfordville; Henry Whelan, Beloit; and August Sarrow, Janesville, the committee appointed to investigate the buying of lime crushers for the county. They will be purchased in the near future. Already the man who will devote his entire time to the operation has been secured.

The committee that was appointed to investigate the proposition which provides that the farmers will take over the Levi Case grist mill call the farmers around Janesville, the only one that will be affected by the purchase and suggest the purchase. The committee appointed to investigate the purchase is as follows: H. A. Clevenger, John Waldman, and E. S. Smith.

AMERICANS SCORE 21 MORE POINTS

U. S. Athletes' Total Now 179 in Olympic Meet—Sweden Next with 68

Antwerp, Belgium, Aug. 21.—America scored 21 points in the Olympic games today. Sweden was next highest with 18 points, Finland scored 8, Italy 7, Australia 5, Canada 3, South Africa 3, and England 2. The total scores do not include the 10 points scored by the various countries to date.

United States 179, Australia 17, Sweden 18, Denmark 10, England 8, Norway 7, Finland 8, Czechoslovakia 5, France 3, South Africa 3, Canada 3, Belgium 2.

P. J. McDonald, N. Y. A. C., won today with a put of 11.25 metres. P. Ryan, Loughlin, Lyceum, New York, was second, with a put of 10.95 metres.

The finals in the Greco-Roman wrestling were held this morning. Finland scored 19 points, Sweden 7, Denmark 3, and Norway 1 point.

Italy won the 3,000 metre walk at the Olympic games today in 13 minutes, 14.1 seconds. Parker of Australia finished second, 14.5 minutes. American Walker's club, third.

At the close of the ninth event of the decathlon, only two Americans remained, U. of Missouri, and Lieut. G. L. Vidal, United States army, had survived the eliminations, and with eight Europeans, finished the decathlon in the last event, the 1,500 metre run.

Crowds Get in Free.

Faced with a huge deficit of a lack of attendance, the Belgian Olympic committee threw more than two-thirds of the seating capacity of the stadium open to the public without charge. As a result the structure was almost packed to its full capacity of 30,000.

This action was taken, it was stated, because it was realized the Belgian people might not afford to pay even the equivalent of 20 cents in American money to see the Olympic contests.

Six American runners and an immense field of athletes of other nations are entered in the classic marathon to be run tomorrow, the feature of the seventh Olympiad.

The Blue Moon

A TALE OF THE FLATWOODS

By DAVID ANDERSON

(Copyright by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

The bluffs caught up the cheer that followed and flung it back in multiplied echoes, clear and far up and down the night-bound shore. The Boss, still hungry for the feel of the jaw, reached forth a grimy finger and meditatively stirred the pearl where it lay in the finger's palm.

"This one's rounder than them other two. An' it's got a shinier sheen. Course I can't see it properly, but I put it at not less a five thousand."

The Pearlhunter was restless. There was a trail woman back in the cabin at Fellen Rock to whom the finding of the pearl would mean more than to anybody else in the world. It would mean the man's name, and the man's name, as his mind reverted to the story of the afternoon—back to the house on a hill that overlooked the river—and good-bye to the cheer forever.

But it was some time before the flood of excitement died down. It is not one camp in a thousand that sees a Blue Moon. The value of it was still under discussion when the Boss happened to remember the fish still lying in the boat.

"Fish!" he exclaimed. "The fish'll be 'em."

"And I must be getting home," the Pearlhunter was quick to seize the chance.

Followed by the others, the Boss went down to the boat—not, however, until the Pearlhunter had torn a corner out of the cloth spread down by the fire, wrapped the pearl up in it, and put it carefully away in his pocket.

Insisting on relieving the Boss from rowing on the way back, he took his place at the oars and walked for the boat to be pushed off into the stream. But the Boss, with his hand upon the bow, stood hesitatingly before giving the final shove.

"Shorty," he called to the man who had danced the hornpipe, and who was now gone back to the fire, "bring me my oil slicker!"

"I reckon I'll camp at Fellen Rock tonight," the Pearlhunter protested against his going to such trouble, but the Boss had his way.

"That pearl's likely too valuable to take chances on," he muttered, laying his coat in the boat with the shotgun across it, giving the final shove to the boat and leaping in. "I reckon I'll stick around here."

He sat in the boat, waiting for the Pearlhunter to come back. The Pearlhunter, however, did not come back. The Pearlhunter, however, did not come back.

The young man at the bars made no reply to these remarks. He was thinking of that bit of fanning cloth behind the link at the cabin door. For a moment the impulse came on him to tell the Boss, but he decided to keep his own counsel.

The moon had peeked her round face up over the hills by the time they landed at Fellen Rock. The Pearlhunter picked up the big bag and led the way to the cabin up under the cliff.

The candle was still shining out through the one small south window, a little square of luminous yellow set in the gray and ragged logs. Full of the big news he had just heard, the Pearlhunter hurried up the slope. The pearl almost seemed to become a creature of sense and sympathy; to feel warm against him; the luster of it to shine through his pocket.

When within a few feet of the door he heard his mother cough and the whistle, choked. He dropped the fish and darted in at the door.

She stood stooped in front of her chair, clutching the table. Her head moved over the cloth as if trying to write. Blood was pouring from her mouth and falling to the floor. She sprang at her. She clutched his arm.

hung to him. He would not have believed it possible she had such force in her fingers. She struggled painfully to choke back the blood; then strove painfully to speak. No word came—only that awful whistling hissing gasp. He saw the luster die in her eyes—the eyes that in these days had been so wonderful. They were trying hard to tell him something—words her lips were not able to frame. He strove to read their messages. In vain! There came a last gasp; her body suddenly stiffened, quivered, relaxed—and he caught her back into the chair. The Pearlhunter raised her hands to cross them on her lap. Some object fell from the lax fingers to the floor. It was the voice's glove, stiff and mildewed with age.

Turning to lay it upon the table, he stood startled and staring. A cry brought the old Boss to his side. Two words, scrawled in blood on the cloth, glared up at them:

"Your father—"

There had been a further attempt to write, but the effort had only resulted in a scrawl, impossible to decipher.

CHAPTER III.

A Man Without a Name.

The Pearlhunter sat on the doorstep of the cabin, as June upon the slope under the trees; June in Wolf Run chuckling and clinking along on its way from spring and rain, and all to the river, and in the heart of a cardinal rocking upon the top twig of a tall hickory; December in the heart of the snow-covered slope, beyond the tangled underbrush and in the edge of the grass-covered open strip that bordered the river shore, the snow was broken by a mound of fresh earth. He had trimmed it round with shells brought up from the river; upon the head had planted a cluster of orchids, the lady's-slipper of the Flatwoods. They were like her, the orchids—a lonely flower, one to a winter of solitude.

He had been a hunter for so many years, because nobody knew the woods so well.

As he looked back over the years, he found himself pondering the contradictions of his mother's life. In the light of the story he had heard, the memories of the past seemed to be in the midst of mean surroundings, the stern pride that had held her so long in exile became a woman that had, somehow, been longed for.

The muck and grime of the river had never smudged her. Through it all she had kept as pure, as white, as a flake of snow and as cold.

"What air you callin' 't do with them wild roses here in 't, lumber in 't the window—keep 'em in 't chuck 'em out!" I can't find but one more tumbler.

The voice of the old Boss half started the Pearlhunter. The grunt old fellow had never left him, night or day.

The Pearlhunter had forgotten him, the hunted house, the dishes, everything. He lifted his face from his hands, rose, and entered the cabin. The Boss was pointing to three wild roses—red, a pink, a white—in a tumbler of water in the window.

The vision the Pearlhunter had seen on the rock at the pool came again. A vision—it had been just that, only that, an exquisite picture flashed before his face and instantly started away—a picture he would never see again. It seemed unreal as he looked back upon it in the light of another day. But no, there were the roses. He bent his face down and caught the aroma of their breath.

"Let them be," he said. "They will last another day."

The Boss made no reply. To him they were merely faded roses. They were sitting on the doorstep about to light his pipe when the younger man called him. With the freshly filled pipe in one hand, the unlighted pipe in the other, he rose and stepped back into the cabin.

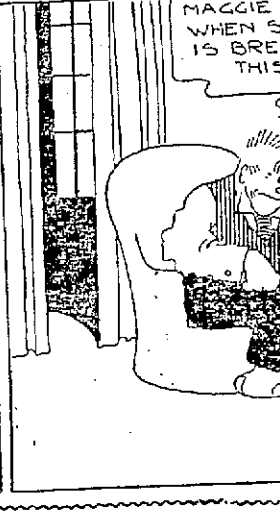

The Pearlhunter was standing before a small fire covered trunk, scarcely larger than an ordinary suitcase of the present day. It stood open, with the lid thrown back, exactly as it had stood two nights before when he came up from the river and found his mother dying; its contents seemed to indicate that they had been hurried through by some one whose haste had been great—without his mother. It hurt him to recall the cause of that haste. The bloodstained glove she had held in her hand lay uppermost, probably tossed there by one of the river men.

POISONOUS FUNGI.

"In Russia, however, we were never just a picture. There we were known as a sporting dog, and loved to hunt for foxes, and smaller game such as foxes and hares. We were hunted by sight and not by scent. When the hunters started out on horseback, with each man went three Wolfhounds. Hunting dogs were when the wolves broke cover, the nearest hunter slipped his Wolfhounds. Our part in the hunt was important. We had to catch and hold our prey, but were taught not to kill. We had to be evenly matched, as it was necessary for us. If we had not played a partnership game, the wolf would have escaped, he being the heavier and the stronger animal. The hunter immediately rode up and made the kill."

Billy Whiskers

FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

"So, it was I they were talking about," thought poor Billy when the firemen had tied him to the pump. "Had I only known they would have taken me away from here, I wouldn't have been so nervous. Our next step was to the English court, three of us being sent as a gift to Queen Alexandra by the Czar. In England they re-named us 'Gee whizz.' The thought a moment later, 'What this water cold that they are pumping upon me, and won't I get even with them all when I get loose?' cried one of the men, for Billy suddenly tossed his head, giving him a bump on the nose. Then two of the men began to laugh. The third kept the pump going, so, squirm and wriggle as he might, Billy got a generous supply of water, and was drenched and shivering in spite of his efforts to free himself.

At last the fireman thought he was clean enough and sent him to dry the clothes of one of them said, 'Well, Billy Jr., how do you find yourself?' Billy glared at him and shook his head in answer, but there was a grin on his face.

Next the men drew out to decide who should untie him and, strangely enough, it fell to the lot of the fireman who was always cracking his whip at Billy and tormenting old One-horn. When this man found that he was to untie Billy, he said, 'Very well, boys, you all get inside of the engine house and shut the big door, leaving the little one open for me to run through, but be sure you shut it quickly behind me or Billy will be inside as quickly as I am.'

"All right," they answered, and away they went to do as he bidden. When the man who was to do the untieing approached cautiously and first untied Billy's legs, leaving his head still tied to the pump, then with a sharp knife he cut the last cord with one swift slash and ran for the engine house. Quick as he was, our Billy was not far behind him, but he covered half the distance that lay between them while with another he went bang against the little door through which the fireman had just disappeared.

The door was slammed shut in double-quick time, and had Billy's head not been a hard one it must surely have split in two when it struck the door. However, it was made to withstand hard knocks and so, undismayed, he backed off to gather impetus for another rush; and then with a last plunge he split the door from top to bottom and landed in a confused heap right in the arms of the astonished fireman, who scrambled in all directions with more haste than grace, thinking only of getting out of reach of Billy's avenging horns.

One man climbed up on the high seat of the fire engine, another ran down cellar, while the third, the particular one Billy was after, bounded up the stairs that led to the firemen's bedroom. Billy kept on after him.

WHO HAS LANDED CASHION? BELIEF SAMSON CLUB HAS

Despite the rain of yesterday and last night and the overhanging clouds of today, the game between the Samson Tractors and the Beloit Fairies will be played at Beloit this afternoon. Canvas covering over the Beloit field protected the ground from becoming muddy.

The umpire between Beloit and Janesville over Cashion, the south-paw of the Clyde Iron Works club, appears to be settled today. Officials of the Beloit and Janesville teams were at the station to meet Cashion as he arrived here and immediately put out strings to him.

It is believed that Perring landed him, but this is not positive. Efforts to get in touch with the Samson manager to confirm the rumors were unsuccessful.

However, Wolfe will play short-stop for the Samson today, Schwind going to third. Milton, the other new man is not likely to be seen in a Janesville uniform today or tomorrow.

Beloit May Not Play. Beloit has also been after Cashion all week. According to reports from Beloit, Manager Al. Chubb tried to get the south-paw last Sunday when it was learned that Pendergast might leave the Fairies' ranks to go to Janesville. Chubb's reaction was with the Clyde Iron Works team of Duluth, playing against the Gateway city crew. Chubb believed that Cashion had accepted his offer. The pitcher was to report to Beloit on Thursday and had wired that he would see Chubb, Saturday. A later wire stated that Cashion was with the Samson and had raised the ante.

Fairies May Protest. According to the Beloit News, the Fairies may protest if they do not play at Cashion appears in a Samson uniform. They base such plans on the ground that Perring made overtures to a player in the Beloit contract. It is understood, however, that Cashion did not put his John Hancock to the Beloit contract.

As an encouragement to Fairies batters, the Kuefer Lumber company of Beloit has assumed the duty of paying to every engineer who knocks a home run.

However he increased his lead in total bases to 245, on 182 hits which include 32 doubles, fifteen triples and seven homers. Eays of Boston, although dropping three points, continued to be the runner-up with .353, while Nicholson of Pittsburgh stepped in front of Roush of Cincinnati for third place, with a mark of .341.

THOUSANDS CROWD CATHEDRAL TO BE AT CHAPMAN FUNERAL

Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—Raymond Chapman, star player of the Cleveland American League Club and idol of the Fanberg Auto Co., received the reverential homage of sorrowing Clevelanders.

While the bell of St. John's Roman Catholic Cathedral, where the services were held, was tolling thousands of persons stood with bared heads as the body of Chapman was carried to the altar and the last rites of the church were said.

It was the largest funeral in Cleveland in years and not since the visit here of Cardinal Mercier, hero of Belgium, has such a mass of people attempted to enter the cathedral.

The service, a solemn high requiem mass, started at 10:15. Rev. Father S. Nash was the celebrant and the sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. William A. Scullen, chancellor of the diocese, who paid Chapman an eloquent tribute.

Dr. Scullen's tribute to Chapman as a man and a ball player and his words of comfort to the immediate relatives brought tears to the eyes of thousands in the church.

Eau Claire.—George Tibbets, livey man, was fined $400 and costs for stealing four automobile tires from the Fanberg Auto Co. In addition he must make restitution amounting to $3750. Harry Conley, 17, was the principal witness against Tibbets.

Are the Best Tires too good for the Small Car Owner

EVERYBODY agrees that it is generally desirable for merchandise to be graded.

A good principle that often comes out at the wrong end for the car owner—the man with the upkeep on his mind—the tire bills to pay.

He feels that tire economy should be a personal contract with the tire-user. Not a transaction with his car, whether it be big or small.

Reasoning tires in human terms instead of trade custom has written this policy for the United States Rubber Company—

Build all tires to one standard and let the tire user choose his own size.

When the oldest and largest rubber manufacturing concern in the world focuses all its resources upon one grade, one quality, it makes one client—and that is the whole public.

This single ideal is visible in any U. S. Tire factory, at any U. S. distributing branch, in any U. S. dealer's store.

Seeing that the tire-user gets his economy mileage along with an unlimited guarantee.

Policies are harder to make than tires.

Probably the deepest reason why U. S. demand keeps always ahead of the number of tires the U. S. makers can supply.
